Opening lecture

Pandemics and Human Suffering: The Image of the Doctor in Camus' ethics of responsibility

Eva Illouz (IL)

This lecture has 2 parts: the first investigates 3 different ways of understanding pandemics: as a breakdown of social order; as an increased surveillance from the state; and as the opportunity to display an ethics of responsibility. In the second part of the lecture, I show how Camus' existentialist approach to the plague is in fact the best way to understand the nature of the social breakdowns brought about by a pandemic as that of the Coronavirus.
